

List of Case Types

Here you will find a brief description on the types of cases within our jurisdiction, that is, the cases we can and cannot consider on appeal or reference.

The basis for jurisdiction for all appeals to the Administrative Appeals Chamber of the First-tier Tribunal is set in legislation. There are several different provisions under which Parliament has given Upper Tribunal Judges the jurisdiction to consider appeals.

This section lists our jurisdictions, and for each one gives you a link to a page dealing with the jurisdictions with forms and guidance appropriate for that jurisdiction (along with a link to the body from which the appeal or reference lies).

There is limited public funding for legal representation in some cases in the Upper Tribunal. Details can be found on the website of the Community Legal Service.

The Administrative Appeals Chamber considers appeals (or in some cases references) from:

- Chambers of the First-tier Tribunal (which in certain areas may include appeals from cases dealt with in all parts of the UK),
- non First-tier Tribunals in Northern Ireland, Scotland and Wales. And,
- certain bodies which are not tribunals.

It also considers:

- applications for judicial review which,
 - a) fall within categories specified by the Lord Chief Justice and should be issued to the Administrative Appeals Chamber. Or,
 - b) which are transferred to it by the Administrative Court.
